HIS LIFE MAY BE SAVED

The Night Clerk and the Two Women Discharged for Lack of Evidence.

The notoriety given to the Van Dyke House, corner of Bayard street and the Bowery, over the case of James W. Clift, of Philadelphia, as told in "The Evening World" yesterday, has caused a watchful eye to be placed upon it by

The fact that Clift was detained there, either with or against his will, for nearly three weeks and fed on nothing but whiskey; that no physician was called in until the last moment. and that his relatives were not notified as to his condition, are matters of

So far as the police are concerned, it is immaterial that the young night clerk who was arrested yesterday by Inspector McLaughlin's men, on account of the case, was discharged in the Tombs Police Court this morning for lack of legal incriminating evidence, and that the two women witnesses were also set

Inspector McLaughlin and his men are fully satisfied of the fact that the desire of the young night clerk and some of the others in the place was to secure Clift's money. In order to do so they would apparently have been willing to keep him there for months, until the end finally came, as it would have done. Clift would there for months, until the end finally came, as it would have done. Clift would then have been carted to Potter's Field. He would have been buried there, and his relatives would not have been made acquainted with the facts.

That the Van Dyke House is one of the lowest class of disreputable places on the Bowery an "Evening World" reporter, who spent two nights and three days there, can vouch for. Every disorderly woman knows it. It is a safe asylum to which they can decoy their drunken dupes, safe from interference, to rob and to plunder at their pleasure.

As to the Clift case, it is the same, apparently, as hundreds of others.

The Van Dyke House, from which place he was taken in an ambulance at the instance of "The Evening World" yesterday, is known as "Olif Suicide Hall," Many dead bodies have been taken from it, and it is no fault of the management that Clift's name was not added to the list of dead men.

Charles Dickens, in his best moments, never pictured a scene of London life to equal that which the reporter witnessed in the Van Dyke House last Monday night. Thieves from Philadelphia and elsewhere talked about their "profession" just as calmiy as a broker would talk of stocks. Stories were told of robberles, with and without violence; of robberles, with and without violence; of robberles in broad daylight, of ruined homes and women until the newspaper man, used to scenes of the wildest kind, stood appalied.

It was a common matter, according to the stories, for girls to be enticed into the place—young, innocent girls, daugnters of honest parents—to be ruined there. To the attaches of the place they were the same as the old-time street walkers, no questions were asked. Rooms were assigned, and then the children—for in some of the cases they could be called nothing more—were turned into the street, to add another name to the list of the fallen ones.

No one in the hotel even dreamed of

No one in the hotel even dreamed of the reporter's identity. He sat at the same table for two nights with the gang that infests the place. Night Clerk Eddy Goodwin was one of the clerk Eddy Goodwin was one of t umber at these gatherings.

At the end of the bar is a little round prison without bail, to await the result

At the end of the bar is a little round table, made to accommodate nine or ten persons. In the daytime it serves as a "reading room," all the morning papers being placed upon it. In the night-time, however, the papers are removed and then the table makes an excellent board, upon which the habitues throw dice for drinks.

Further back is a room, not more than 5x12 feet, in which are a table and a few chairs. That is the place where the women take their victims, preparatory to securing rooms.

Men and women came and went all night long. Every woman seemed to know night Clerk Eddy Goodwin very well. He had a nod and a smile for all of them.

Last Monday night two of the Philadelphia crooks had talked of several robberies and of the people they had "done up." They went into the mysteries of a few "games" and showed how the unwary could be caught. Then the conversation drifted to the man upstairs in room 20. That man was clift.

"You cought to have seen that fellow."

"You ought to have seen that fellow when he came here first." Eddy said. "He had any amount of money. He threw $5 bills around like water, I have "He had any amount of money. He threw $5 bills around like water. I have got in my pocket now an order on a man in Wall street for $200. When I get it we will have a good time. You can bet I am not going to get left."

One of the men present asked to be allowed in on the "deal," and the accommodating Eddy said he was willing. Providing the other man would accompany Eddy to Wall street the next day, he was to be given a new suit of clothes. All this out of the money which Clift was supposed to have on deposit.

A fac-simile of the order which Eddy referred to was published in "The Evening World" yesterday. How the reporter obtained that order is probably one of the things which will worry Eddy and the others to the end of their days.

"Why don't you give him a knocker-out? one of the gang asked.

"Oh, what is the use?" Eddy replied. "It would be hard, anyhow, on the — We have had two dead men taken out of this place already, and he is bound to make the third. Flynn, according to "Maggle's" first story, wanted to put the man in a room to which access might be had by a frreescape, but she objected; she also insisted that she was the only one who had given Clift a particle of food during the three weeks, which she did in the shape of an occasional glass of milk or a plate of soup from the free-lunch counter. She added that when Flynn found this out he said that she would have to attend to her own tusiness, and not ot give him any more food. BROOKLYN NEWS.

One of the transient guests of the hotel was robbed of his overcoat at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The thief was seen putting on the coat, and a policeman was appealed to. The latter refused at first to make the arrest, as it was off his beat. Later, however, he did arrest the man. In the Tombs Police Court, later in the day, however, the man was discharged.

Inspector McLaughlin had no other alternative than to allow the night clerk and the two women to be released this morning. The legal evidence was not sufficient to hold them on.

It was stated to-day that a watch, which Clift was known to have had in his possession on entering the Van Dyke House, is missing.

Coroner Kene, of Brooklyn, was asked this morning to investigate the death the man was discharged.

Clift's story is remarkable in many ways, and in the saving of his life, if nothing else, "The Evening World" is satisfied. If it has called the attention of the police to the place it will have accomplished something greater still.

Clift is a married man, a travelling salesman, and belongs to a good family in Philadelphia. He spoke long and earneatly to an "Evening World" reporter to-day. He will recover, so at least the Bellevue Hospital physicians say. He is only just recovering his reason. of Riley Bailey, an inmate of the Kings County Insane Asylum, at St. Johnland. Bailey, who was a negro waiter, thiryears old, died on Monday

His sister, Mrs. Sarah Porter, Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, reported the case this morning, and asked for an investigation. She said she believed that her brother had died from a beating he had received at the hands of one of the nurses. Balley was taken ill with the grip

She declares that he was not violently insane; he was idiotic and melancholy. On Monday, she told Deputy Coroner Deegan, she received a despatch saying that Bailey was very ill; that he was weak and liable to die.

She started to go to the asylum early Tuesday morning. On reaching the institution she was informed that Bailey had died late the night before. She says she learned that her brother had become unruly and one of the nurses had struck him in the face, breaking his nose and knocking him down.

When she questioned the Superintendent, she said, she received no satisfaction. She was told that if she thought there was anything wrong in the case that she ought to ask the Coroner to investigate it. $200 and went down to the races. There he made a considerable sum—several hundred, he said.
Years ago he had known Enos Runyon, the broker, who was a member of the firm of Martin & Runyon. The latter is now out of the brokerage business, however, and is Tax Receiver for Newark, N. J. Clift, on returning from the race track, tried to find Runyon and deposit his money with him. In this he failed.
"I know I had a lot of money," he said to-day, "and that I did deposit some of it somewhere. Who got it I cannot say," of it somewhere. Who got if I cannot say,

"I do not remember having been in the Van Dyke House at all. All of the last two weeks is a perfect blank to me.

"I came on to see the sights, and I guess I succeeded," he added bitterly. When told that his brother and brother-in-law had come on from Philadelphia, he was startled. He said he did not wish them to see him in his present pittable condition.

He denies the stories told about the woman.

Arthur C. Rideout, sixteen years old old, of 723 Union street, Brooklyn, and Cecil R. Wood, twenty-one years old. of 303 West One Hundred and Thirtyfourth street, New York, were held by Justice Tighe in the Butler Street Court. Brooklyn, this morning, to answer charge of stealing $200 worth of jewelry from Mrs. Conrad E. Selso, of 70 Ber keley place. Two weeks ago Mrs. Selso engaged th Rideouts to put electric bells in her house. They brought Wood along as an house. They brought Wood along as an assistant.

They worked four days, and on the fifth they told Mrs. Selso that the job was finished. Then they left. On Sept. 18, Lirs. Selso discovered that a pair of diamond earrings and a gold ring, valued at $50, had been stolen. She told her hubband, and Mr. Selso suggested that the Rideouts might have taken the jewelry, but his wife, who had known the young men a long time, would not entertain the theory.

"When is this gol durned boat going to get to the Wild West Show?"

Col. Cody and Mr. R. C. Mudge, of 10 Wall street, also a friend of Judge Stillwell's, took the latter to Orange, N. J., yesterday, While there, the Judge was persuaded to stand up before Edison's kinetoscope. Afterwards Mr. Mudge telescraphed to the Chief Clerk of Judge Stillwell's court: "Judge Stillwell has been caught fast in a Jersey kinetoscope." Several days later she discovered that other articles were missing, and an inventory showed that the following property had been stolen: Two pair of earnings, a sealskin sacque, a gold watch, watchehain and locket, two rings, and a silver sour lade.

Yesterday Mrs. Selso was called to the front door and she saw William Rideout. He asked to see her husband, when Mr. Selso arrived William handed him one of the rings and a bunch of pawnitckets for the rest of the property.

He refused to disclose the identity of the person who gave him the tickets. Mr. Selso paid him the amount, he said he had paid the pawnbroker and Rideout left.

The Selsos then decided to report the matter to the police. Detectives Raileich and Kelly were detailed to arrest the trio. The Rideouts were first taken into custody, and they afterwards arrested

Wood admitted that he and Arthur had stolen the jewelry. The plan was arranged before they went to work, he said. They were to steal the stuff and give it to William to pawn. The proceeds were to be divided. He said and give it to William to pawn. The proceeds were to be divided. He said that William had nawned all the jewelry except the ring, for $40. The ring was given to a girl, bu William afterwards became frishtened and got it back. William Rideout declares that Wood and his brother committed the theft and gave him the proceeds to pawn.

Blows were exchanged and a pitshed battle resulted. Mr. Plowman heard the row and ran to the rescue of his children.

A war of words ensued between the two, and Mr. Plowman threatened to have Weldon arrested. Weldon, to head off such action, went to Justice Tighethe he next morning and swore out a warrant for Plowman, charging him with assault in the third degree.

Plowman then went to court and, after explaining the case, obtained a warrant for Weldon's arrest for threatening him and striking his child. Weldon was arraigned and the examination set for today.

When he appeared in court Weldon was in perfect health. He weighed 180 nonline was not guilty, and that he would be sent to pison.

NEWARK, Sept. 27.-Mrs. Eller Doyle, twenty-seven years old, died at Michael's Hospital this morning from the effects of burns received in from the effects of burns received in a peculiar manner.

While filling kerosene lamps her clothing became partially saturated. She struck a match and a portion of the brimstone flew and struck the spot where the oil had fallen.

In an instant her clothing was ablaze. Her brother threw his coat around her and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze, but not until she had been fatally burned. Mrs. boyle resided at 252 Chestnut street, this city.

GOODBY'S STRANGE DEATH.

His Body Found Near the Lynd-hurst Station.

(Special to The Evening World.)

LYNDHURST, N. J., Sept. 27.—Robert
Goodby, said to be a pilot on the Twenty-third street ferry New York, was picked up unconscious at the depot here at 6.30 o'clock test night, and died a few minutes later.

been blackballed or rejected by the medical examiners. Father Madden Council has headquarters in Brooklyn, asking for information about the new regardization, and received a reply which is said to have been very unsatisfactory. Father Madden Council has about 200 members. The benefits range from $2,000 to $5,000.

An examination of the body showed to outward evidences of violence. It is believed that Goodby was drunk when he met his death.

Mrs. William Thoulec, wife of a ma-chinist of Lyndhurst, is reported to have told Coroner Ullman that Goodby was her brother, but this is denied by her her brother, but this is denied by her husband, who denied knowing the man. Goodby is said sto have been a frequent visitor at the Thoulec house. Yes, terday he was out dining with two women, one of whom is reported to have been Mrs. Thoulec. On his way home he is said to have stopped at Woodby's Hotel and drunk several glasses of beer. Persons who saw him at the time say he was intoxicated.

What caused Goodby's death and who was with him at the time are matters which Coroner Ulman hopes to divulge by an inquest at Rutherford this evening.
